

Karnov Group strengthens its technology division by appointing CTO

Karnov Group, a Scandinavian market leader in providing unique and mission critical legal and tax information, has appointed Jesper Kingo Christensen as Chief Technology Officer. Jesper will be leading and developing Karnov Group's digital offering, while being responsible for the technology division. The division serves 40,000 Danish and Swedish online users. Jesper will also become part of Karnov Group's management team.

With the objective to further strengthen Karnov Group's IT dimension and tech division, Karnov Group has appointed Jesper Kingo Christensen as Chief Technology Officer. He will be responsible for developing the company's digital solutions and continuously improving the user experience.

Flemming Breinholt, CEO of Karnov Group, said: "the appointment is fully in line with our objective to strengthen the company's digital offering and user experience. We believe that Jesper's wide knowledge in IT management will serve our aim to maintain our position as the leading provider of information solutions in legal, tax and auditing, in order for our clients to conduct better decisions faster."

"I am thrilled and very excited to be joining this innovative company. Karnov Group is a truly modern business, unique of its kind in Scandinavia, while also fully positioned to adapt its business to the ongoing digital transformation of the service sector. I am looking forward to being part of the journey ahead", said Jesper Kingo Christensen.

Jesper previously served as Vice President for Pandora, where he led the work on Global IT planning. He has an extensive background in software development, project management and IT strategy for global operations.

Jesper Kingo Christensen's appointment is effective from September 17.
